Persistent or Vexatious Contact Policy

Introduction

Hartlip Parish Council is committed to dealing with all customer contacts fairly and impartially. As a Council we acknowledge that certain queries and/or complaints can be difficult to resolve, and so can cause anxiety and distress to customers, employees, and councillors.

Whilst we always aim to find a way to resolve such matters, there are times because of the nature or frequency of their contact with the Council, a small number of customers hinder the consideration of their own, or other customers' cases. This may be because of unacceptable behaviour in their dealings with us, or because they become unreasonably persistent in their quest to obtain the outcome they want, or because their request is vexatious.

This Policy is designed to set out the Council's approach in such cases. It does not cover deceitful, abusive, offensive, threatening, or other forms of unacceptable behaviour from customers which the Council does not and will not tolerate. If this occurs, we will take proportionate action in line with our policies relating to potentially violent and unacceptable behaviour, in order to protect the wellbeing of our staff and the integrity of our processes.

Unreasonably persistent or vexatious contact

Whilst not an exhaustive list, examples of what we deem to be unreasonably persistent or vexatious contacts include those contacts which in the view of the decision maker are:

- unfounded accusations;
- personal grudges;
- repeated demands for action or information;
- refusal to accept documented evidence as being factual;
- persistent pursuit of a complaint where the complaints procedure has been fully implemented and exhausted; and
- repeatedly contacting the Council with letters of complaint or telephone calls, placing disproportionate demands on staff.

Our staff manage a number of matters at any one time, using their time and resources to best effect. They cannot do so if someone acts in a way which dominates their attention with

- frequent;
- lengthy contacts; and
- repetitive requests for information

When necessary, we will take appropriate action as follows.

Process where a contact is considered unreasonably persistent or vexatious

Where a decision is made that a customer has become unreasonably persistent or their request is vexatious, the Chair will in the first instance give the customer a warning that if their behaviour continues, we may take action or apply restrictions which may include; but are not limited to:

- requesting contact in a particular form and/or with a named officer/ Councillor;
- restricting number of telephone calls and/or time limits for such calls; or

Other options may be considered depending upon the customer's particular circumstances and behaviours. The Chair will inform the customer in writing if any such restrictions are imposed.

Termination of contact

In cases where the customer persists in communicating with us about a particular matter or a complaint that has completed all stages of the Council's complaints process, we may decide to terminate contact with them. In such cases the Chair will inform the customer in writing that we will not respond further to any communications regarding their complaint or the specific matter being pursued.

Where restrictions are imposed or a decision is made to terminate communication, the customer has a right to request a review within 10 working days of being notified of the decision. Any such review will be carried out by the Chair.

Other relevant matters

New contacts / complaints from a customer who has had such restrictions placed upon them will be treated on their own merits, and previous restrictions will not automatically apply to a new matter.

The Council reserves the right to take further action as appropriate.

Policy review

This Policy will be reviewed every year. The Council reserves the right to change this Policy at any time in the interests of good governance.
